Re: Invacuation

I am writing to let you know that we have, once again, practised our invacuation drill in school today. The children were all prepared in assembly first thing this morning, where we reminded them of what an invacuation was and also let them hear the difference between the evacuation alarm and invacuation alarm. Some explanations were given of why we may need to sound the invacuation alarm eg perhaps a loose dog had got over the fence, reasons for everyone to be inside with doors closed to remain safe.

Pupils were reminded that when they hear the bell, they were to go back to their classrooms, sit on the carpet in silence with their teacher, who would be waiting for instructions from senior leaders, via the walkie talkies.

The drill went very well and the children responded very sensibly to it.

I hope you understand the need for us to prepare to respond to situations that we hope may never arise in school, in order to keep your children safe. Our aim was to prepare the children with this message with consideration and sensitivity. I wanted to let you know about today's actions before the children come home and start talking about it which may cause you alarm or confusion.

Thank you for your ongoing support
